

IN OUR OPINION

Cheers

□ ... To the Resource & Policy Exchange, CitiHope physicians, and doctors, nurses and the pharmacist at O'Connor Hospital who are working on a clinical pharmacology education model for students in Kyrgyzstan.

A CitiHope group recently visited the hospital in Delhi. CitiHope has a patient assistance program that provides drugs and medicines to people living in isolated mountainous regions of Kyrgyzstan.

Matthew C. Krzyston, executive director of the Resource & Policy Exchange, said his Delhi-based organization was started about a year ago to help developing countries improve and modernize policies.

Sharing resources and knowledge can lead to better medical care. We hope this exchange is helpful to the health-care providers in Kyrgyzstan and eventually will result in greater accessibility to medical care.